REPORT ON FEEDBACK FROM PARENTS

The college actively seeks parental feedback to assess the satisfaction levels of those who enroll their children in various programs. This feedback is crucial for several reasons:

Student Satisfaction and Success: Parents play a vital role in their children's education, and their feedback offers valuable insights into aspects such as academic experiences, campus life, and support services. Understanding parental perspectives helps the college evaluate program effectiveness and make improvements to enhance overall student satisfaction and success.

Reputation and Word-of-Mouth: Positive parental feedback can significantly impact the college's reputation, leading to increased enrollment. Conversely, negative feedback can harm the college's image and discourage prospective students. Addressing concerns and valuing feedback helps build a positive reputation and encourages positive word-of-mouth recommendations.

Collaborative Partnership: Engaging parents in the feedback process fosters a collaborative partnership between the college and parents. It demonstrates the college's recognition of the importance of parental involvement and their role as stakeholders in their children's education.

Parental Involvement and Support: Feedback highlights areas for improving parental involvement and support, including communication channels, opportunities for engagement, and access to information. Addressing this feedback helps create a welcoming environment for both students and parents.

Holistic Student Development: Parental feedback provides insights beyond academics, shedding light on aspects like mental health support, safety measures, extracurricular opportunities, and resources for personal growth. Considering this feedback ensures a comprehensive approach to student development and well-being.

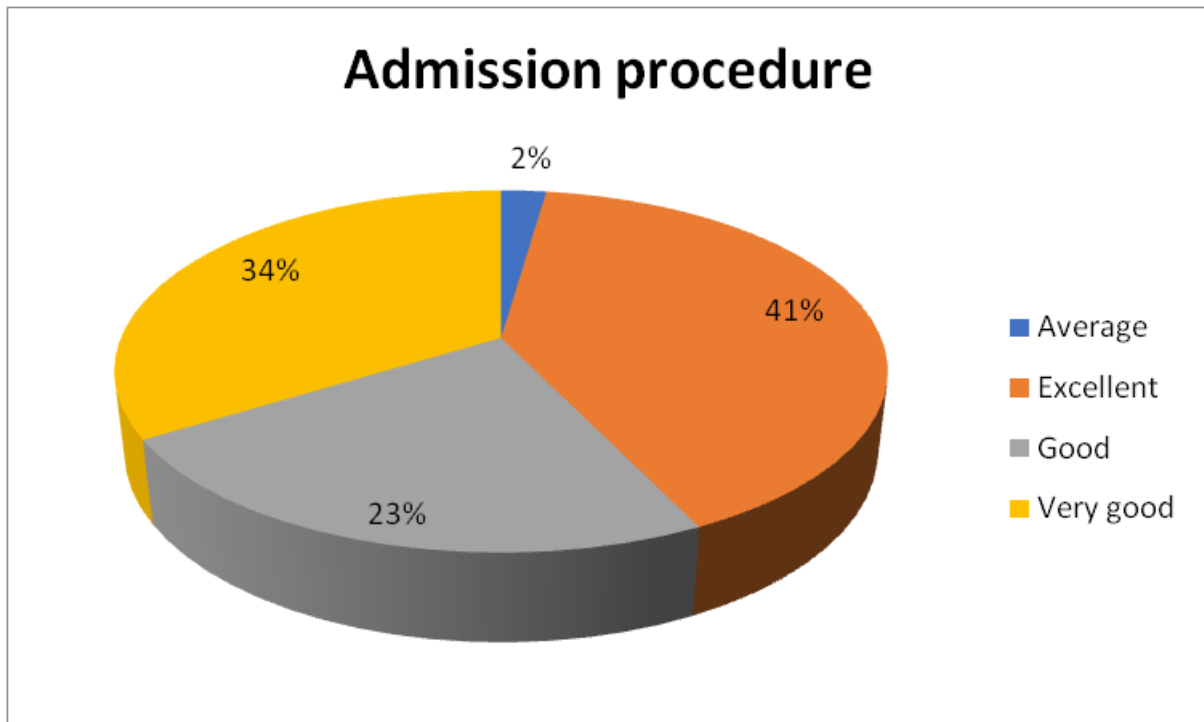

Continuous Improvement and Strategic Planning: Parental feedback is crucial for continuous improvement and strategic planning. It helps identify strengths and areas for improvement, informing decision-making and resource allocation. This adaptability ensures the college meets evolving needs and expectations.

The feedback collected utilizes a five-point scale, ranging from "Excellent" to "Poor." The diagram displays the higher scale on the left and the lower scale on the right. The questions posed in the feedback are designed to gather comprehensive insights for continuous enhancement.

FEEDBACK ON CURRICULUM BY PARENTS-2021-2022

The active solicitation of parental input by the college is integral to assessing the satisfaction levels of enrolled students, recognizing the crucial role parents play in their children's educational journey. This feedback is deemed indispensable for multifaceted reasons. Initially, parental insights serve as a valuable tool in the ongoing evaluation of program effectiveness, facilitating the enhancement of academic experiences and the improvement of support services. Such enhancements contribute significantly to overall student satisfaction and success. Moreover, positive feedback not only augments the college's reputation but also fosters increased enrollment. Concurrently, addressing concerns proactively acts as a preventive measure, mitigating potential harm to the institution's image. Additionally, the active involvement of parents in the feedback process fosters a collaborative partnership, underscoring their significance as stakeholders in the educational framework. Feedback also sheds light on areas that warrant improvement, encompassing parental involvement, communication channels, and support mechanisms, thereby creating a welcoming environment for both students and parents. Beyond academics, parental perspectives encompass critical aspects such as mental health, safety measures, extracurricular opportunities, and resources contributing to holistic student development. This comprehensive approach ensures the college's adaptability to the evolving needs of its educational community. Finally, the collected feedback, systematically captured on a five-point scale, serves as a guiding compass for continuous improvement and strategic planning. The thoughtfully designed survey questions aim to gather comprehensive insights, ensuring the college remains agile and responsive to the dynamic needs and expectations of its diverse student body and their families.

CONCLUSION

The feedback garnered from parents stands as a crucial source of insights, playing a pivotal role in evaluating the overall effectiveness of our educational institution. Parents consistently convey their appreciation for the quality of education provided, emphasizing the robust academic foundation and practical skills instilled in their children during their tenure here. A majority of respondents commend the positive influence of our esteemed faculty members, acknowledging their expertise, unwavering dedication, and vital support throughout.

Moreover, parents express gratitude for the institution's commitment to fostering an inclusive learning environment, instrumental in facilitating the personal and academic growth of their children. The array of extracurricular activities and supportive networking opportunities is duly recognized as indispensable elements contributing to a comprehensive and enriching educational experience.

Constructive feedback predominantly centers around the desire for continual enhancements in communication channels, parental involvement initiatives, and additional support resources. Suggestions include fortifying the connection between parents and the institution for transparent communication and active involvement in their children's educational journey. The feedback accentuates the importance of sustaining and expanding support services for both students and parents alike.

In summary, the parental feedback report serves as a testament to the satisfaction and appreciation expressed by parents, coupled with constructive suggestions for ongoing improvement. This underscores the institution's success in delivering a comprehensive education and underscores the paramount importance of maintaining a robust support system for the continuous betterment of our educational community.
